| Year 1 | Fall | 12 units of coursework:
• 200A core seminar
• 8 units of electives
• Colloquium (1 unit) | The purpose of the First-Year Critical Literature Review is to evaluate students’ familiarity and facility with key theoretical approaches, debates, and frameworks within the field of Ethnic Studies. It consists of a 20-page critical analysis of how existing scholarship within the field of Ethnic Studies informs their consideration of an area of interest. It is an opportunity for students to summarize, synthesize and assess the general body of literature from the first year seminars, and to make connections to an area of interest. These connections are not necessarily obvious, and the paper is an exam of how students can synthesize and re-apply the shared literature of their cohort. Students should draw from the scholarship covered in their first year courses. Little, if any, new reading should be undertaken. The goals of the theoretical Framework paper are: 1) demonstrate comprehensive and holistic knowledge of key theoretical approaches, debates, and frameworks of Ethnic Studies; 2) incorporate and expand upon key texts, ideas, and concerns discussed in the first-year core course sequence (200A, 200B, 200C); 3) develop a critical analysis of how existing ES scholarship informs an area of interest; 4) define what constitutes an Ethnic Studies project; 5) the total number of texts referenced should not be less than ten, although students may focus their paper on an in-depth examination of 4-6 key texts. |
| | Winter | 12 units of coursework:
• 200B core seminar
• 8 units of electives
• Colloquium (1 unit) | |
| | Spring | 12 units of coursework:
• 200C core seminar
• 291A/Comprehensive Research Preparation: The Literature Review
• four unit elective
• Colloquium (1 unit) | The Second-Year Research Methodologies Paper evaluates students’ knowledge of interdisciplinary research methods in the service of an Ethnic Studies research agenda. It consists of a 20-25 page critical paper that encompasses a critical evaluation of the selection of Ethnic Studies research methodologies. The goal of the research methodology paper is for students to demonstrate their familiarity with the breadth of interdisciplinary methods appropriate to the field of Ethnic Studies and their mastery of the research methodological and analytical skills necessary for writing a Doctoral Dissertation in the field. |
| | Fall | 12 units of coursework:
• 4 unit methods course – Historical Methods and Archives
• 8 units of electives
• Colloquium (1 unit) | |

The General Ethnic Studies Reading List draws from Part I of the Ethnic Studies Graduate Reading List, posted in the Graduate Handbook. This list will provide a framework for establishing command of the core theoretical, historical, and methodological foundations of Ethnic Studies.

The Specialty Field Reading List defines a broad area of expertise related to the student’s dissertation research interests. Bibliography choices should follow relevant and emerging areas of scholarship that provide the broad context for the dissertation topic.

The Teaching Reading List demonstrates mastery over an area in which the student expects to offer a variety of courses. A Teaching Field may overlap the terrain of the Special Field, but should be substantially different from or wider than the Special Field.

Students begin discussions with faculty for convening a Qualifying/Doctoral Committee.

Students must complete the Qualifying Exam by the end of Winter quarter; this includes:

- convening a committee (should be organized in Winter Quarter of the third year)
- completing the Specialty Field Paper
- completing the Annotated Syllabus
- passing the oral examination
- fulfilling the language requirement, as needed

Seven days before the scheduled qualifying examination, the student must submit the written Special Field paper and Annotated Course Syllabus to the examination committee. A two-hour oral examination will occur on the appointed date, and the student will answer questions posed by the committee about the General Ethnic Studies reading list, the Specialty Field paper, the Annotated Syllabus, and comprehensive knowledge of Ethnic Studies scholarship.

Students attend required workshop, Preparing the Dissertation Prospectus

Prospectus Meeting: The candidate will furnish the prospectus to the dissertation committee members and will schedule a one and a half hour Prospectus Meeting with the entire dissertation committee. The Prospectus Meeting must be at least one full week after the Prospectus has been completed and sent to Committee members.
Years 5-6: the Dissertation

| Year 5 | Fall   | 12 units of coursework per quarter: 12 units of dissertation research coursework (ETHN 299) or 8 units of dissertation research plus 4 units of apprentice teaching credit for students with Teaching Assistant appointments | • Researching and writing the dissertation in consultation with student's doctoral committee; students prepare for job search and begin interviewing |
|        | Winter |                                                      |                                           |
|        | Spring |                                                      |                                           |
